PROPERTY MANAGEMENT

What a property manager actually does all day.

Six jobs. Almost none of it is property.

1

Vendor paperwork.

Insurance certificates, W-9s, trade licenses. Each one expires. Each one has to be asked for again.

2

Maintenance triage.

What is an emergency, what waits until Monday, who gets sent, and who calls the resident back.

3

Leasing and move-outs.

Applications, signatures, keys, deposits, inspection photos, and the deposit accounting that has to go out on time.

4

Renewals and notices.

Which leases end when. Who is renewing, who isn’t, and what has to be sent before which date.

5

Rent that didn’t arrive.

Reminders, payment plans, ledgers, and the follow-up nobody enjoys and everybody still has to do.

6

Owner questions.

Statements, invoices, spend sign-offs over the limit, and the answer to “why did this cost that.”

PROPERTY MANAGEMENT

Almost none of this is property.

It’s documents with dates on them, and every date needs a person holding it.

What’s missing from this list?
